He got to France with the First division, became Sergeant make it a model village Bentley, was wounded and came home to conduct a single-handed recruiting campaign in the south that has backed all previous exploits of the kind off the map. The sergeant conceived the idea of "hiking" through the Blue Ridge mountains in search of good soldler When he wound up with a stay at Walter Reed hospital here to recover from the exhausting effects of the experience, he was shy 54 pounds in weight, had spent $2000 of his two money, worn out 17 pairs of army shoes, had been shot at by a suspicious moonshiner; but had enrelled 1107 recruits, 1004 of whom had passed muster and are now in the army.

Incidentally the suspicious young moonshiner who took a crack at the soldier with a rifle is one of the recruits. Bentley talked it out with the publication Mar 1 bath and a first publication of this notice.
